

ACC Chapel Teams Are Here For You

During the COVID-19 health emergency, most ACC wing chapels have had to pause “normal operations” to comply with new social distancing guidelines—rest assured, chapel teams are still actively caring for Airmen and their families.

Most chapel teams have instituted some form of online streaming for weekend worship services. In some areas, live-stream attendance is significantly higher than normal levels of in-person attendance, which is wonderful news. Thanks to social media connections and help from our Public Affairs offices, chapel teams are finding creative ways to offer secure online or telephone, counseling to those who need it. They’ve even conducted group marriage and family resilience events via teleconference and F2F social media platforms, and are working to provide in-person pastoral care in the form of workplace visitation or virtual dorm feed—all within new safety protocols.

The bottom line: chapel teams are available to meet your needs and the needs of your Airmen. Call your local chaplain’s office.

Stop by the chapel to see posted notices about upcoming events & support options.

Check Facebook or your wing’s Public Affairs page to confirm current chapel services.

The Air Force has not taken a knee during this crisis, and neither has your chapel team. We are committed to providing for your First Amendment right to the “free exercise of religion,” and ensuring you get the resiliency tools you need to stay in the fight.
